

Plymouth Congregational Church

1014 Broad Street
Providence

Criterion C architecture

Criterion Consideration A religious property

Period of Significance
1915-1944

CHAPEL, 1878 - 1881

PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE, 1878

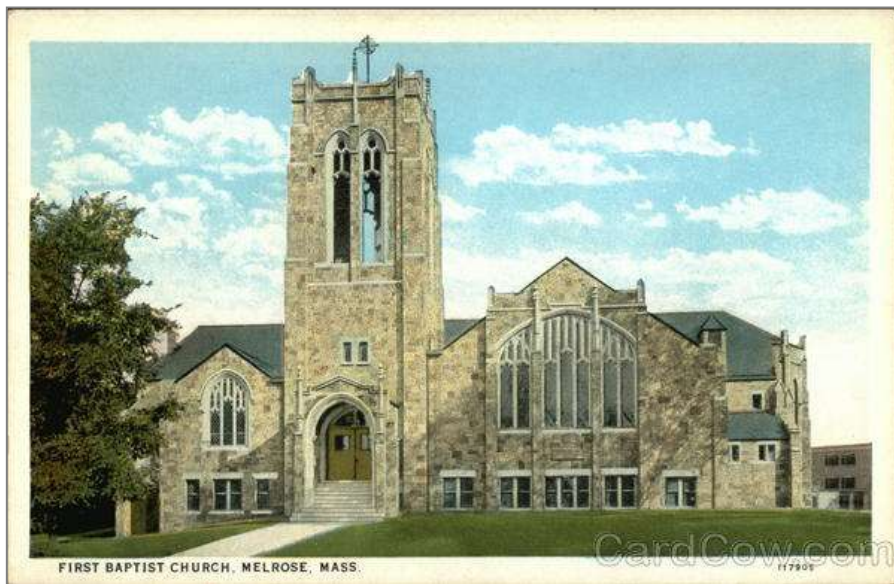

PLYMOUTH-UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
BROAD STREET AND PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE
1919-

Congregational Church of Wellesley Hills
Wellesley, MA (1901-02)

Second Congregational Church
Attleboro, MA (1902)

First Baptist Church
Melrose, MA (1907; NR District)

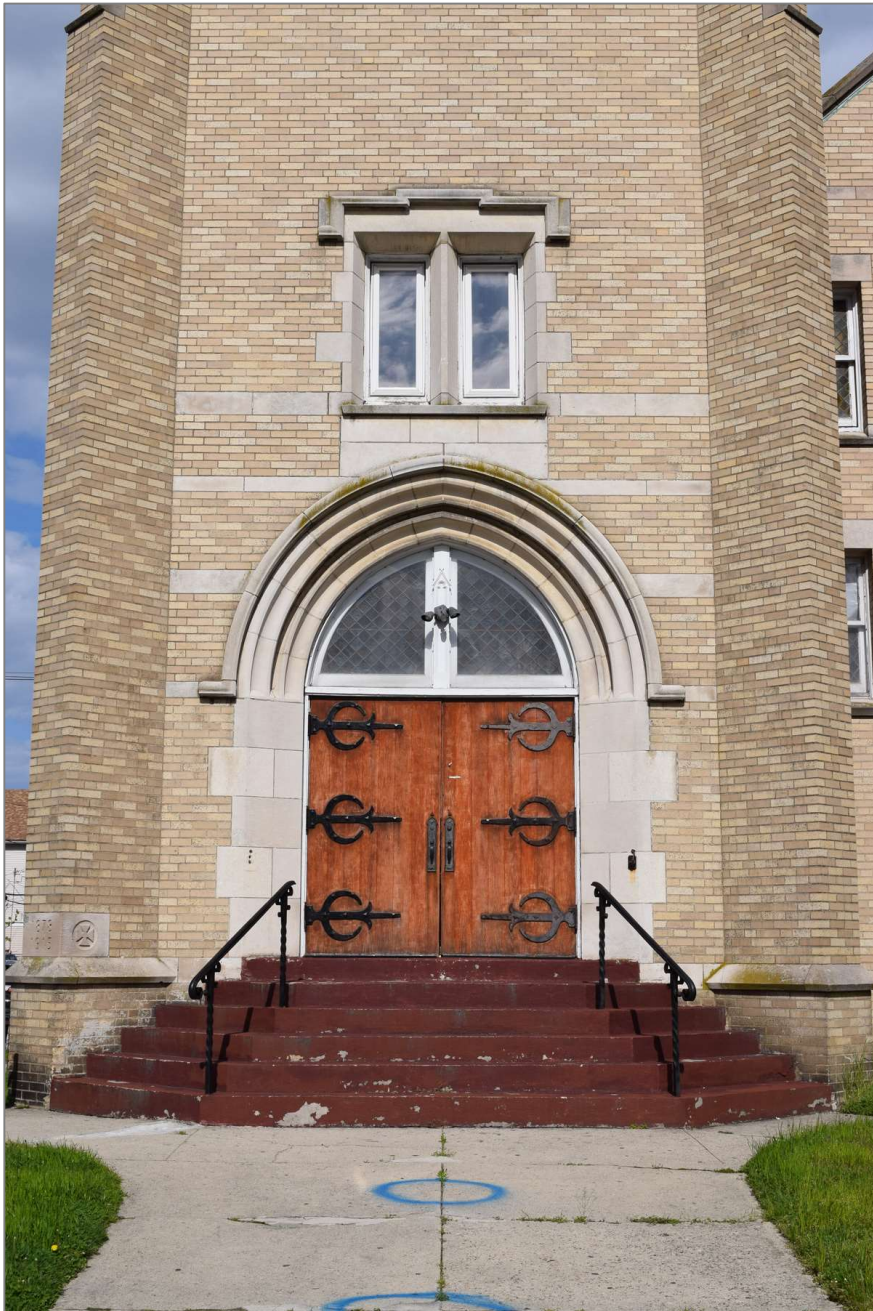

Cliftondale United Methodist Church
Saugus, MA (1915)

Rhode Island Historical Society Collections

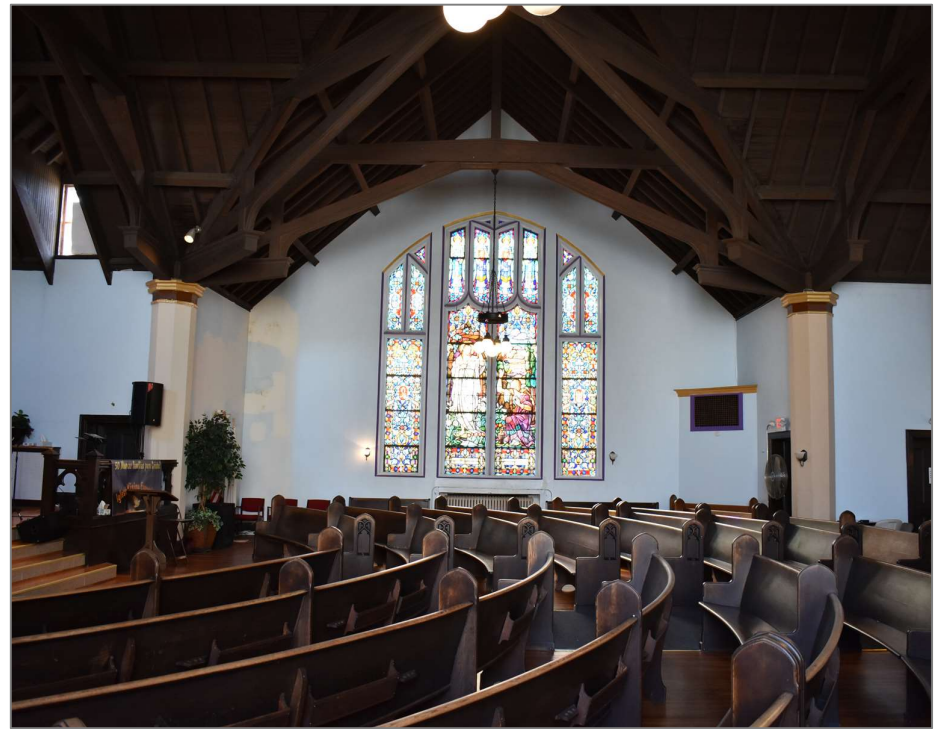

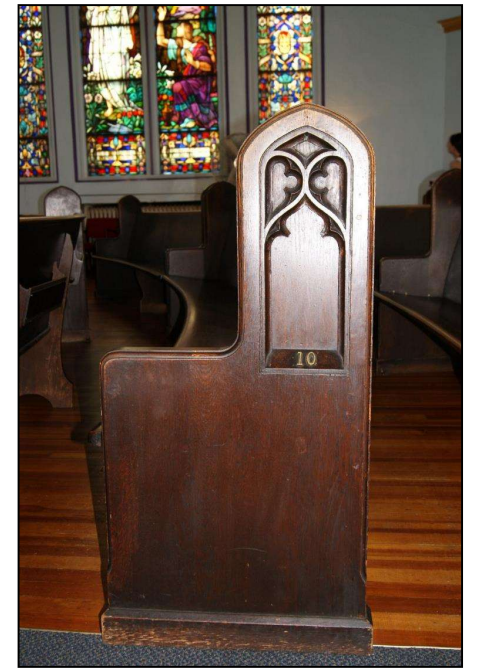

west (front) and north elevations

west (front) elevation

Sunday school

basement hall

basement classroom

1927

Blacks Take Title to White Church

By ROBERT D. WHITAKER
Journal-Bulletin Religion Editor

The vision of a white congregation and its pastor became a reality for a black congregation and its pastor yesterday as the former held its last service and turned its house of worship over to the latter.

The transfer took place at a joint service of the Plymouth-Union Congregational Church and the black Holy Cross

Church of God in Christ in the Plymouth-Union building at 1014 Broad St.

It was the last service at that location, too, for the small Central Christian Church, an independent group of about 25 persons who have been worshipping with the Plymouth-Union congregation since 1966. Believing in Communion every Sunday, the Central Christians had their own Communion services three Sundays a month and joined with the Congregationalists once a month.

Yesterday's service was conducted by the Rev. J. Wesley Prince, Plymouth-Union pastor; the Rev. Clarence E. Farrow, pastor of the 260-member Holy Cross Church, and the Rev. Frederick C. Gilbert, minister of the Central Christian Church.

The Rev. R. Vernon Law-Continued on Page 8, Col. 4

Presenting the keys to the church building to the Rev. Clarence E. Farrow (r), pastor of Holy Cross Church of God in Christ, was Louis Simmons, custodian for many years.

—Journal-Bulletin Photo

1971

2016

Plymouth Congregational Church

1014 Broad Street, Providence

Excellent Integrity

location, design, setting, materials, workmanship, feeling, association

Criterion C for Architecture

Criteria Consideration A

a religious property deriving primary significance from architectural or artistic distinction or historical importance

Period of Significance: 1915-1944